ELECTION After a long fought battle, Shawn Atleo has been named national chief of the Assembly of First Nations.

The battle between Atleo and Perry Bellegarde went to an eighth ballot Thursday morning, where Atleo ended up with 58 per cent of the vote. After that Bellegarde conceded his bid.

"It's been just a tremendous privilege," said Atleo.

Much of the night had seen a deadlock.

Atleo said challenges include health, poverty, education and unity.

"It's not just kids that ask that," he joked.

J. Patrick Wright, executive director for Racing For Kids, said that the nurses at the children's hospitals saw great improvement with visits like this.

"It takes their mind off their (setting) and back to getting home," Wright said. "These visits are a big part of recovery."

Wright said that the drivers visiting and on the IndyCar circuit were very willing to share their stories and company with the kids.

"They are very conscious of their responsibility to the community," Wright added.

Racing For Kids has raised over $5 million for the hospitals it has visited.

End is near: Bank of Canada

RECESSION Canada's economy will pull out of its worst recession since the early 1990s this quarter, the Bank of Canada said on Thursday, and the world economy has likely averted a worst-case scenario and is bottoming out.

"With the economy supported by better financial conditions and higher levels of business and consumer confidence than anticipated, the downturn in activity in the first half of the year has been less severe," the bank said in its Monetary Policy Report. "And growth is now projected to turn positive in the third quarter."

In April the bank had projected a turnaround in the fourth quarter. It now sees third-quarter growth of 1.3 per cent on an annualized basis, rather than the one per cent decline it forecast earlier, ending three straight quarters of decline.

It also projects stronger-than-expected quarterly growth through the first half of 2010, but weaker-than-expected growth through 2011, when its current forecasts end.

It said the recent rise in the Canadian dollar, which the bank attributed to higher commodity prices and a weak U.S. dollar, is moderating the overall pace of growth.

The bank projects the currency will average 87 U.S. cents, or $1.1494 to the U.S. dollar and said its strength will help boost import volumes starting in the second half of this year.

The currency closed at 92.04 U.S. cents, or 1.0865 to the U.S. dollar. REUTERS

For racing veteran Paul Tracy, this weekend means more than just glory on the track.

Tracy will be racing in support of the Canadian military charity Wounded Warriors, which supports soldiers fighting overseas. "I met some of the soldiers in Toronto and they've just come back from Afghanistan, and they're just so proud to have somebody representing them on the race track," said Tracy.

He added, as a Canadian,

he is proud to represent the country's soldiers.

Tracy, 40, is an accomplished Canadian race driver, known for his aggression on the track.

He said that he has no specific plans to retire anytime soon, despite his original idea to race until he is 42.

Fans should expect a packed weekend

ACTION There is no shortage of action to keep race fans happy through this weekend's Rexall Edmonton Indy.

In addition to three sets of IndyCar practices, Friday's schedule includes qualifying for the new Firestone Indy Lights, the Corporate Championship Race, and NASCAR Canadian Tire Series qualifying at speeds in excess of 200 km/h.

Topping things off that evening is a free concert by the Sam Roberts Band at 7 p.m. on the Budweiser Turn One Stage.

On Saturday, the gates open at 9:30 a.m. Race fans will enjoy IndyCar and GT practice, as well as a pair of races. The NASCAR Canadian Tire Series race runs at 11 a.m., followed by the Firestone Indy Lights race at 2 p.m. IndyCar qualifying will take place immediately afterward at 3:30 p.m.

On Sunday, fans will want to beat the rush and get to the track when gates open at 9:30 a.m., because it's race day. The NASCC Eurasia Cup GT Invitational race will take place at 1:30 p.m., followed by the Rexall Edmonton Indy at 4 p.m.

Relations must start with mutual respect

New chief faces poverty, land claim issues

Christine Williams

News Analysis

FocusOn
First Nations

Ending a nine-year leadership, departing Assembly of First Nations head Phil Fontaine instructed his successor to eradicate First Nations poverty as a top priority.

But now that Shawn Atleo has taken over the reigns, the hostilities between Aboriginals and mainstream Canada over some 900 outstanding land claims should be an equal priority.

The 42-year old Atleo, who was elected national chief yesterday, believes both the federal and provincial governments "continue to operate from a position of non-recognition," according to his platform communiqué.

The latest confrontation between the Canadian Border Services agency and the Mohawk Council of Akwesasne at the eastern Ontario border crossing highlights the situation's urgency. Mohawk warriors burned bonfires around the CBSA compound. They wore camouflage and had a bulldozer on hand, ready to swarm in if the CBSA proceeded with the arming of its officers. It was a travesty for federal border agents to be chased out of office by such lawlessness.

The Canadian public is tired of: The spectre of violence in tense standoffs, blockades, and looming threats, all driven on by rogue Aboriginal activists, not necessarily supported by their own communities.

No one wants violence or another Ipperwash. Governments are our elected representatives, obligated to control civic unrest for the safety of its citizens.

A solution demands that we must start from a position of mutual respect, and Chief Atleo has his work cut out for him as the new leader of the Assembly of First Nations.

As a businessman, and chancellor of Vancouver Island University, he has touted himself as a bridge builder, regional politician and champion of unity.

The majority of AFN chiefs and Aboriginal progressives see education and peaceful demonstrations as the best way to inform mainstream Canada of the plight of First Nation peoples. Beyond this, both the federal and provincial jurisdictions need to sit down at the negotiating table with Aboriginal leaders.

Dragging heels on the issue is objectionable given the frustrations on both sides. The only other option is to await bloodshed.

Tough guidelines for Taser use in B.C.

JEFF HODSON

DZIEKANSKI B.C. is adopting strict new guidelines on the use of stun guns, like the Taser, stemming from the 2007 death of a Polish immigrant at Vancouver's airport, the province's solicitor general said Thursday.

The new rules mean an officer can only use a conducted energy weapon if there is a danger of bodily harm and all lesser force options have been exhausted. The rules are based on 19 recommendations issued by retired judge Thomas Braidwood, who was tasked with examining the weapon's use. The commission was launched following the death of Robert Dziekanski, who died after being Tasered multiple times. The new rules apply to municipal police officers, sheriffs and RCMP.

Politicians, rabbis arrested after probe that included organ sales

NEW JERSEY Dozens of New Jersey politicians, officials and prominent rabbis were arrested Thursday in a sweeping federal probe that uncovered political corruption, human organ sales and money laundering from New York to Israel, officials said.

The 10-year investigation, dubbed "Operation Bid Rig," exposed influence-peddling and bribe-taking among a network of public officials and a separate multimillion-dollar money-laundering ring that funnelled funds through charities operated by local rabbis, said the U.S. attorney's office in Newark.

The cast of the 44 arrested featured Hoboken, N.J., Mayor Peter Cammarano, who took office three weeks ago in the industrial city visible across the Hudson River from New York.

"New Jersey's corruption problem is one of the worst, if not the worst, in the nation," said Ed Kahrer, assistant special agent in charge of the FBI in New Jersey, who has worked on the investigation since it began in July 1999.

"It has become ingrained in New Jersey's political culture," he said, calling corruption "a cancer."

In scenes that could have been lifted from the hit TV series The Sopranos, they met in diners, parking lots, even bathrooms, officials said.

"The politicians willingly put themselves up for sale," said acting U.S. attorney Ralph Marra.

The probe also uncovered Levy Izhak Rosenbaum of Brooklyn, who is accused of conspiring to broker the sale of a human kidney for a transplant. According to the complaint, Rosenbaum said he had been brokering sale of kidneys for 10 years.

"His business was to entice vulnerable people to give up a kidney for $10,000 which he would turn around and sell for $160,000," said Marra.

Obama enters racial debate

U.S. President Barack Obama plunged his presidency into a racial debate and set off a firestorm in one of America's most liberal bastions by siding with a black Harvard scholar who accuses police of racism.

Saying he was unaware of "all the facts" but that police in Cambridge, Mass., "acted stupidly" in their arrest of Henry Louis Gates, Obama whipped up emotions on both sides of the issue. But many in Massachusetts said he crossed a line by passing judgment on police while acknowledging he did not have all the facts. Online polls in Massachusetts show strong support for the white arresting officer. A police union also has

Canada's collective shame

Video installation explores plight of missing women

FourthWave

Canice
Leung

metronews.ca/fourthwave

Sarah Jean de Vries. It's not a name I knew before seeing filmmaker Janis Cole's video installation, Remember Their Names, at a Toronto gallery, but I'd now be hard-pressed to forget it.

Her missing poster, case No. 98-88486, reads like this: Known prostitute and drug user; black, white, Aboriginal, Mexican Native heritage; age 28; last seen at Princess and Hastings streets on April 14, 1998.

She is one of 27 dead women Robert Pickton faces murder charges for; one of 68 women, Indians, junkies and whores, missing from Vancouver's Downtown Eastside.

Adopted into a white family in Vancouver, Sarah gravitated towards the DTES and its fellow outsiders. Black Sarah, as she was nicknamed, had a difficult life; in her journal she lashed out at violent johns and insensitive cops.

Not a week into her disappearance, friends and family posted and pushed police to act — not just for Sarah, but for dozens who had disappeared since the 1980s.

That inaction is Cole's constant theme. A screen flashes quotes from police: "We've done as much as we could." "We're in no way saying there is a serial killer ... (or) the women are dead."

The installation loops footage of Sarah shooting up. "There's three ways

FocusOn FirstNations

you can go: Jail; dead; or end up a lifer down here," she says. "I'm not the one to tell you not to do it because I'm sitting here doing it myself ... but just stay away from it."

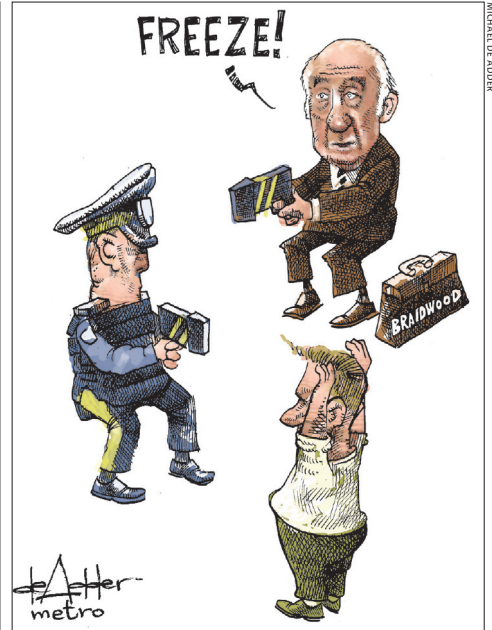

In a 1999 Seattle Times article, Sereena Abotsway echoed Sarah's despair, saying she feared for her safety. She joined community marches to call for police action as women disappeared. Two years later, she, too, went missing, one of six women Pickton was convicted of killing in 2007.

This is Canada's collective shame, ignoring women like Sarah and Sereena, who felt fear and vulnerability with urgency, who asked for (and gave) help, but received none.

It's a tired cry for a static situation: Why has nothing been done? Since 1969, 18 women have disappeared or been murdered on Highway 16, the Highway of Tears, in northern B.C. Last fall, best friends Maisy Odjick and Shannon Alexander disappeared from the Kitigan Zibi reserve north of Ottawa without even their wallets, but for months police maintained the teens had simply run away.

"No one cares, we are just junkie scum. Yet if we had been somebody important and our daughter had gone missing," Sarah wrote, presciently, before her disappearance, "no stone unturned, no rock or cranny would be left unsearched."

Chinese scientists grow live mice from skin cells

Chinese researchers have managed to create powerful stem cells from mouse skin and used these to generate fertile live mouse pups.

They used induced pluripotent skin cells, or iPS cells — cells that have been reprogrammed to look and act like embryonic stem cells. Embryonic stem cells, taken from days-old embryos, have the power to morph into any cell type

"We are confident that tremendous good can come from demonstrating the versatility of reprogrammed cells in mice, and this research will be used to ... understand the root causes of disease and lead to viable treatments and cures of human afflictions," said Fanyi Zeng of the Shanghai Institute of Medical Genetics at Shanghai Jiao Tong University. "It would not be ethical to attempt to use iPS cells in human reproduction. It is important for science to have ethical boundaries," she said, adding their study was "in no way meant as a first step in that direction."

If you're on Facebook you may have seen the ad that encourages you to tell your stories about living in, working in, or visiting Edmonton.

Submitting a video makes you eligible to win a prize of $5,300 of your hard-earned tax dollars. A written or audio story makes you eligible for a prize of $3,500. This site has been up and running for a few months, so it is worth taking a look at what's on it.

In such a creative city, one would expect to find thousands of entries. No such luck. At the time I am writing this, there are only 170 stories on the site.

Even more depressing is that only 93 of those stories are actually submitted by visitors to the site. The remaining 77 stories and videos have been paid for by the city's communication mavens. More depressing still is the lack of comments on the stories that have been posted.

The good news is that given the paltry number of entries, you would stand a pretty good chance of winning if you submit a story.

The bad news is the response to this initiative has been underwhelming to say the least. There's no counter on the site, so it's hard to tell how many page views there's been. The most popular story has had 3,400 views. Not too shabby by you say. But let's put that number into perspective.

"Rather than paying a Toronto-based consulting firm to advise us on how to tell Edmonton's story, the word wallahs at the city should have just asked Trofimuk."

Thomas Trofimuk is not a name you are probably familiar with. But you are probably going to hear it a lot in the next few months. Trofimuk is one of those creative types of which this city is so proud.

His third novel, Waiting for Columbus, which by all accounts is likely to be a bestseller and which is being considered for a movie, will be in stores in late August in Canada, the United States and Britain. Trofimuk has his own website that gets about 500 unique hits a month from all over the world, and to date he has had more than 50,000 page views. Those are impressive numbers for a guy with no tax dollars to use to get his name out to the world.

So what's my point here? Well, maybe rather than paying a Toronto-based consulting firm to advise us on how to tell Edmonton's story, the word wallahs at the city should have just asked Trofimuk.

McDonald's shares slide after modest rise in sales

McDonald's Corp reported lower-than-expected June same-store sales Thursday and its shares fell 4.9 per cent after the top-performing restaurant chain only matched Wall Street's profit view.

"The problem is that good isn't good enough for these guys," said RBC Capital Markets analyst Larry Miller, who said as McDonald's shares approach $60 US, the company needs to show growth catalysts to lift its stock.

As part of its second-quarter results, McDonald's reported June sales at established restaurants rose 1.8 per cent in the United States, 4.7 per cent in Europe and 0.3 per cent in the region that includes Asia and the Pacific, the Middle East and Africa.

That was a 2.6 per cent increase for established restaurants across all regions in June when analysts were expecting a 4.8 per cent rise, according to RBC Capital Markets.

McDonald's — one of the few large restaurant chains still reporting same-store sales gains — said it remains confident in its outlook for the year and it expects July sales in stores open at least 13 months to be similar to, or better than June's.

EnCana profit plunges but oilsands still prove steady

ENERGY EnCana Corp, Canada's biggest energy company, said Thursday its second-quarter profit fell 80 per cent as oil and gas prices sank, but operating results beat expectations on a strong showing from its oilsands division.

EnCana shares jumped $1.28, or two per cent, to $58.93 on the Toronto Stock Exchange. They are up about 3.5 per cent so far this year.

The company also benefited from its lucrative forward sales of natural gas, which protected much of its production from the impact of sagging North American gas demand and weak prices.

Business in brief

AUTO Ford Motor Co. posted a $2.3 billion US quarterly net profit, mainly due to gains from a $10 billion US debt reduction plan, and said it was on track to at least break even in 2011, sending its shares up as much as 9.7 per cent. Ford's operating loss narrowed from a year ago and was better than analysts had expected, despite poor global markets that helped push General Motors and Chrysler into bankruptcy.

Despatie digs deep

Field of Play

Scott Russell

metronews.ca/fieldofplay

Alex Despatie hates to lose and you have to love that. At the world aquatics championships in Rome, Italy, Thursday, Despatie won a bronze medal on the three-metre springboard behind divers from China and the United States, his second medal of the championships, but there was no celebration — no claim that he's over the moon with the result.

"There wasn't anything really spectacular today," Despatie deadpanned in the aftermath. "There certainly wasn't from me anyways."

Indeed, the most decorated diver in this country's history was very good, but not up to his often spectacular standards. With one dive left to deliver and ranking second he had a world championship within his grasp, but came up short. He was forced to settle for third and the eighth medal of his illustrious world championship career to go along with two Olympic silver medals.

"I guess I'm on the podium," he shrugged.

um," he shrugged.

It's been a difficult couple of years for Despatie. He fought back from a broken bone in his foot to win a dramatic silver in Beijing last summer. This competitive year has been a near washout because of an aching back. Still, he sets his jaw and loves to compete in pressure-filled situations and that's been his trademark since winning a Commonwealth Games title in 1998 in Malaysia as a tiny 13-year-old.

"He's the most prolific diver ever in Canada, bar none," said Penny Joyce, the head of Diving Canada.

At 24, Despatie has been at or near the top of his game for more than a decade and suddenly he's the senior diver on the team. He's led the way for a long time and he's bound to keep paving the way in the future. This time he was forced to settle.

"I got a bronze medal, so I guess I can't be mad about that," Despatie shrugged.

But he clearly was angry and that's probably a good sign.

Alex Despatie will likely resurface as the monarch of the diving world someday soon.

Indy honours military

GRAHAM MCCANN
for Metro Edmonton

Canadian soldiers will be getting some special recognition this weekend, as the official Grand Marshall for the 2009 Edmonton Indy was unveiled Thursday.

Canadian Forces Warrant Officer David George Shultz is going to wave the flag and shout the famous words "Ladies and Gentlemen, Start Your Engines," as the drivers are unleashed to the track.

"I am truly honoured and excited like you can't imagine," said Warrant Officer Shultz.

Warrant Officer Shultz has served six overseas deployments since beginning his service in 1988, including Croatia, Bosnia, and, most recently, two in Afghanistan that included combat and emergency missions.

"We are very lucky, privileged, to have people like Dave to protect us and be involved in anything that the country requires," said racer Alex Tagliani, who posed for photos with Shultz in front of his car.

"This is a big event for Canada when they're calling a guy like him to represent our country and to show up in front and say those most famous words ... it gives you chills as a driver," Tagliani added.

Shultz also recalled the people he served with and those who were lost and injured in Afghanistan.

"It's a little tough to think about everything, but the troops that I had out there, they're the ones that deserve the recognition," he said.

Shultz now serves as Regimental Veterans Care Warrant Officer for Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry.

The Rexall Edmonton Indy revs up its engines Friday and speeds through Sunday.

Romancing Zooey

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News

Zooey Deschanel has been getting as much acclaim for her music — with producer M. Ward in the group She & Him — as she has for her acting.

So it's no wonder that with a voice like hers, filmmakers often try to work some singing into her roles. Only, Deschanel wishes they wouldn't.

"I try to avoid it, actually. Not avoid it, but I'm kind of skeptical of it," she says of breaking into song on-screen.

"It's happened to me a lot where they say, 'We have to figure out an opportunity for you to sing!' You really don't," she deadpans.

The actress does break into song in her latest film, (500) Days of Summer, but this time it's totally OK, she insists: "It was just karaoke." (She also contributes to the film's soundtrack.)

Joseph Gordon-Levitt and Zooey Deschanel star in the off-beat relationship flick (500) Days of Summer.

Movie feature

In the film, Deschanel and co-star Joseph Gordon-Levitt bond over some after-work singing, and as luck would have it the two actors, who've been friends for 10 years, had some personal experiences to draw upon.

"Joe got kicked out of karaoke once," Deschanel remembers. "He wasn't drunk or anything. He just got so into the song that he started pulling down the curtains, and the karaoke guy was like, 'I'm sorry, sir. You have to go.'" The song, it turns out, was the Black Crowes version of Hard to Handle. "The stage was just too small for him," she says. "It wasn't his fault."

Deschanel plays the titular Summer in the film, an out-of-order retelling of a romance from the perspective of the guy (Gordon-Levitt). Summer is presented as the perfect woman, a sly beauty who's left a trail of destruction and broken hearts in her path.

Being considered for such a role is big ego boost, Deschanel admits.

"I was very flattered. But if they had picked just one of those girls that everyone normally thinks is beautiful, I don't think that would've worked. Because this is partially romanticizing a little bit of quirkiness."

(Gordon-Levitt is quick to point out that Deschanel is very beautiful, by the way.)

The Hurt Locker a tight thriller

The Hurt Locker

Director: Kathryn Bigelow

Stars: Jeremy Renner

Classification: STC

Rating: ●●●●●

STEVE GOW
for Metro Canada

REVIEW If "war is a drug," as states the on-screen quote at the beginning of The Hurt Locker, then its main character is clearly an addict.

In the latest movie to ponder the subject of war, The Hurt Locker takes a fresh approach to the recent glut of Iraq-themed films (Stop-Loss, Redacted, etc...) by pointing the camera specifically at troopers assigned to disable stray bombs.

Whereas previous Iraq-based films suffered through audience indifference, this Kathryn Bigelow-helmed thriller wins big by focusing more on the nail-biting suspense of Man versus Improvised Explosive Device.

Don't get me wrong. It's not all about unseen enemies.

There is still the added uneasiness of omnipresent locals who purvey the soldiers with suspicious, unknowing eyes. But it is just that apprehension that Bigelow (Point Break) captures throughout the film, giving it a thoroughly engaging heftiness.

Jeremy Renner (28 Weeks Later) stars as James, the leader of the bomb squad who constantly unnerves his fellow soldiers with his recklessness. Based on journalist Mark Boal's experience while embedded with such a squad, this film works more as a fascinating character study than an action-packed thriller.

Gerard Butler and Katherine Heigl get up close and very personal in The Ugly Truth.

As Ugly as they come

The Ugly Truth

Director: Robert Luketic
Stars: Katherine Heigl, Gerard Butler
Classification: STC
Rating: ●●●

CHRIS ALEXANDER
 for Metro Canada

If you're going to call your film The Ugly Truth then you better be sure it's a masterpiece because if it's not, every film critic who lays eyes upon it will simply stand back and let the title review itself.

And make no mistake, the skinny on this pedestrian rom-com migraine-maker ain't terribly pretty.

Grey's Anatomy sexpot Katherine Heigl stars as Abby, a TV morning show producer who gets her feathers ruffled by Mike, played by Gerard Butler, a knuckle dragging hunk who has been hired on as an on-air love advice columnist.

Mike's claim to fame is that he swears to tell "the ugly truth" about male/female relations; lurid from the hip wisdom with little care placed on who he might offend. But although Abby generally loathes her popular star's sexist ramblings, she decides to take a page out of Cyrano De Bergerac and use him to help her get with her neighbour.

This being the sort of movie it is, guess who she really ends up with...

From tender roles in stuff like the underrated Dear Frankie, to the macho action hero antics of 300, to pseudo-hip fluff like RocknRolla, Butler is a seriously strong screen presence and here he proves that he also has a great sense of comic timing.

Watching him spew out cheerfully rude vulgarities, smirking and smoldering is amusing and hints at the go for the throat picture screenwriters Nicole Eastman and Karen McCullah were trying for. The character (and the actor) belongs in a better film.

Director Robert Luketic (Monster in-Law) never finds the right tone to make any of the faux-screwball shenanigans anything more than an exercise in forced, fast talking (and filthy) foolishness. Even Heigl, so endearing in equally smut-lite comedies like Knocked Up and a pair of electric panties is pretty funny... again, if only it were in a better, braver film.

Raunchy but safe and predictable, The Ugly Truth just ends up being unlikable. And Ugly. That's the truth.

REVIEW If the thought "You know what I could really use to entertain me? A Jerry Bruckheimer flick about guinea pigs who are secret government spies," has never crossed your mind, then you could probably skip G-Force.

But in all honesty, you could do worse than the Disney kiddie flick, based on the simple fact that the 3-D graphics are so cool.

Child actor fiery presence in Orphan

Orphan

Director: Jaume Collet-Serra
Stars: Vera Farmiga, Peter Sarsgaard
Classification: STC
Rating: ●●●

NED EHRBAR
 Metro World News

REVIEW The latest addition to the canon of creepy kid characters is a doozy: Esther, the titular ward of Orphan, is poised, polite, preternaturally talented and dresses like an American Girl doll. And then there's that creepy stare, which sends chills down the spine when it transforms into a glare.

Do not cross Esther. Isabelle Fuhrman, who plays Esther, is terrifyingly good. In fact, she's the best thing about Orphan by far.

Vera Farmiga plays a guilt-ridden Connecticut mother of two whose drinking caused the death of her unborn third child. Haunted by nightmares and just generally mopey, she assures her husband (Peter Sarsgaard) that she's ready to try again, this time looking to bring a child into their home via adoption.

Surrounding the complex portrait of a yuppie marriage disintegrating, there's still a scary movie to get to. Unfortunately, the filmmakers rely on cheap scares and misdirection to get there.

Burn, Burn, the new album from Our Lady Peace, was released this week.

Our Lady Peace avoids burn out

Rock act's self-produced new record is looser, paired back and more relaxed

BRYAN BORZYKOWSKI
for Metro Canada

"It took us six other records to figure out how we truly wanted to make records." That might sound strange coming from Raine Maida, the singer of Our Lady Peace, one of Canada's most successful rock acts. The band has made plenty of massively popular discs before, so why now does he feel like he's finally figured things out?

"We did it on our own," he says on the phone from Los Angeles. "It's back to the way this band began. It was just the four of us trusting our instincts."

Maida's referring to the fact that he and his cohorts — bassist Duncan Coutts, drummer Jeremy Taggart and guitarist Steve Mazur — are now an indie band, after departing Sony Music in the last couple years.

They produced their new album, Burn Burn, on their own, mostly in Maida's L.A. studio, and they're self-releasing their disc. (Though major labels are distributing the album.)

Going the do-it-yourself route was a must for the band — if they didn't break free from their label they would have likely broken up.

"We wanted a record we could play live ... we said from the beginning if it sounds good in a live room then that's going to make the record. We didn't want a bunch of overdubs."

Raine Maida

"If we didn't do something like this, after what happened on the last record, I don't know if there would have been another record," says Maida. The Toronto-raised singer explains that the previous disc, Healthy in Paranoid Times, took three years to make after the label kept pushing the band to produce singles.

The music industry was falling apart, so unlike previous records, where Maida says the band was pretty much free to do what they wanted, this time around Sony wanted to make sure they had a big hit on its hands.

"We've never gone into the studio trying to write a hit," he says. "But all of the sudden it was like we need an actual hit. We're always striving to make great records, but it got so convoluted with all that other music business BS."

Getting back to basics really has helped the band. Maida sounds rejuvenated, and the record is definitely an improvement over Healthy in Paranoid Times. While the band is still churning out epic rock 'n' roll, the record is looser, paired back and more relaxed.

"We wanted a record we could play live," says Maida. "You can abuse the studio very easily by getting caught up with all the tech. You can fix something, add this in — we said from the beginning if it sounds good in a live room then that's going to make the record. We didn't want a bunch of overdubs."

Armed with the new disc and newfound perspective on the music business, Maida sounds certain that Our Lady Peace's brush with a breakup is in the past. Now he's ready to hit the road.

"We feel it's really time to get back to that real connection with fans where it's very visceral," he says.

"We're in amazing place right now. In fact, I can't think of a better position to be in."

This is one of those clip 'n' save sort of columns where you'll want to discreetly tear out this page because you will want to try out these programs. Lyric Rat (lyricrat.com): Have you ever been in an argument with friends over who does a certain song? Send whatever lyrical fragment you can recall to this free Twitter application (@LyricRat) and it will reply with the title, the artist and a link where you can read more. Great for settling bar bets.

Shazam (iTunes.com): When a cheesy retro song from the '80s came on in a bar in Singapore where I was visiting with friends, a debate broke out over the name of the artist. I just whipped out my iPhone, cranked up my free Shazam app and within seconds, I had the answer. Shazam uses your iPhone mic to "listen" to a song and then compares it to a master database. It's not perfect, but it's close enough to make you reconsider the existence of magic. (By the way, the song was Who's Johnny by El DeBarge.)

Songkick (songkick.com): I once had an idea for a concert wiki where everyone could upload set lists and reviews for every concert ever performed. Turns out that someone had the same (but better) idea. Songkick allows members to add details of any show to a vast, growing database of gigs past. As of this week, the number of catalogued shows is approaching 1.1 million.

Space Oddity Remixer (iTunes.com): Bowie's career was going nowhere until the BBC started using Space Oddity in their coverage of the Apollo 11 mission. In commemoration of the 40th anniversary of man on the moon, a new app from iKlax allows iPhone users (or with Garageband on the Mac) to try and improve on the original Major Tom story by remixing it. Think the vocals should be tweaked? The mellotron part was always too loud for you? Fix it. Lots of fun for $1.99.

The Tuesday Guide (tuesdayguide.blogspot.com): In Canada, 99 per cent of all new releases come out on Tuesdays. Wouldn't it be great to automatically get a list of the week's Stumped by that song being played at the local bar? The Shazam app on the iPhone can help you determine the name and artist.

new CDs, complete with artwork, mini-reviews and links to buy the downloads? The Toronto-based Tuesday Guide takes care of all the details. You can either visit the website or, as I do, sign up for the weekly newsletter. Indispensable.

TRIAL British singer Amy Winehouse told a London court on Thursday that she pushed a woman after a charity ball last September because she had been scared of her, but denied her in the face.

Dancer Sherene Flash has accused the 25-year-old star of punching her in the eye after she had asked the Grammy winner to pose for a photograph.

"She (Flash) moved her left arm to lean down to me and tried to pose next to me," Winehouse told the City of Westminster Magistrates' Court in London, where she appeared in a grey suit and wearing her hair in her trademark beehive style.

"Her friend came round in front of us and started taking a picture," the Press Association quoted her as saying.

"I was like, 'Do I get a choice in this, hello?' I pushed her up, like away. I wanted her away from me. It was more like an indication of 'leave me alone, I'm scared of you'.

"I meant to just get her away from me. I was scared. I thought, people are mad these days, people are just rude and mad, or people can't handle their drink."

Flash said earlier that Winehouse appeared to be drunk or under the influence of drugs when the incident occurred.

Flash admitted she had had several alcoholic drinks that evening but denied being drunk. She said Winehouse "punched forcefully in my right eye," adding that she was shocked and began to cry. Her lawyer added: "This was a deliberate assault by Miss Winehouse."

The singer won five Grammy awards in 2008 and her album Back to Black won widespread critical acclaim. REUTERS

A lifelong innovator

Superheroes may come and go, but Stan Lee is forever.

At age 86, the grand master of the comic-book world — and the Marvel universe, in particular — is still going strong, creating a fresh crop of mythic characters with outsize powers and troubled pasts. As he reflects on a landscape that has undergone a seismic shift in the past 30 years, Lee is far from out of ideas or ambition.

"People usually retire because they can finally stop working and they'll have the time to do what they really want to do," Lee says. "But I'm doing what I want to do! If anybody forced me to spend a day on the golf course, I'd feel I was being tortured!"

Famous for co-creating some of the most enduring comics heroes in history (Spider-Man, Incredible Hulk, Iron Man, the X-Men, the Fantastic Four), Lee is still innovating. He unleashed his latest creation — a digital comic titled

Time Jumper — yesterday at Comic-Con, a conference he has attended since just after its launch in 1970.

Backed by Disney, the project is made up of serialized five-minute episodes with built-in cliffhangers

Big show

• Disney's splashy launch makes sense. In the past decade, comics have moved up the entertainment food chain and are treated like blockbuster films, with comics creators launching new material as events.

that will be released every two weeks through December.

"Once it's premiered on cell phones and the Internet, it could go anywhere," Lee says. "It could become a TV series, it could become a movie. We want to start this one slowly and build up the fan following and get the excitement and the mystery behind it and have people talking about it."

Disney's initial order is for 10 episodes, with a viral marketing campaign to promote the project and, launched yesterday, a free Time Jumper iPhone application that enables fans to convert photos to comic-book imagery, plus 99-cent episode downloads available on iTunes. REUTERS

Convention offers sneak peek at Hollywood blockbusters

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News

The famed San Diego Comic Con is in full swing this weekend, celebrating its 40th anniversary with four days of panels, parties and sneak peeks at upcoming blockbusters.

What started as a humble meet-up of comic book enthusiasts has grown into the premiere venue for Hollywood to unveil its latest properties to die-hard fans — whether the properties are comic book-related or not.

The biggest buzz this year surrounds James Cameron's upcoming Avatar, a 3-D live action film that's been kept carefully under wraps as the famed director has spent the past five years working on it.

But vying for attention is also the latest film in the Twilight series, New Moon. The series' predominantly female fan base adds a new element to the usually male-dominated convention, lovingly referred to by insiders as "Nerd Prom."

That film, which made a huge splash at last year's Comic Con, is back to celebrate the director's cut DVD with a screening curated by director Zack Snyder.

But Silver has other projects he's focused on now, including the fan favorite DC Comics character Lobo, who should be hitting the big screen soon, according to Silver. "Lobo is one I'm very excited about doing," he says. "We've got a script we like."

Dr. Who out to conquer America

TELEVISION Doctor Who is often seen as a quintessentially English character — an eccentric fearlessly fighting Daleks and Cybermen with the help of his TARDIS time machine in the shape of a 1950s London police box.

Now the British TV hero is out to conquer America, where, despite enjoying a loyal following, he has yet to compete with other science fiction series like Star Trek.

David Tennant, the 10th actor to play Dr. Who since the series started in 1963, has made four special episodes for the BBC series that will be shown in 2009 and 2010.

On July 26 the first episode Doctor Who: Planet of the Dead will be aired on BBC America, part of the British Broadcasting Corporation, and available in stores there two days later on DVD and Blu-ray.

"Growing up with Doctor Who, I was aware it had an international life," Tennant said.

"It has never quite conquered America in the mainstream. Even now it's still not quite in everybody's consciousness, although the following it has is devoted. BBC America is keen to bridge that gap."

Tennant, popular with fans since taking over as the Time Lord in 2005, believes that Doctor Who's international popularity may be explained by his being so British.

"That may be part of its appeal overseas, of course, in the same way of (Agatha Christie's) Miss Marple and other British brands," said the 38-year-old Scot. "It's not sci-fi in the traditional American way, it's not jocks in space."

In Planet of the Dead, Dr. Who is trapped on a desert planet without the TARDIS. When a London bus arrives in the same world, he joins forces with the mysterious Lady Christina to get back home, with the unfortunate bus passengers. REUTERS

DVD Here's a thought: Instead of filling the coffers of Michael Bay (the man behind the insufferable Transformers sequel and other such monstrosities), why not rent (or buy) this CGI-driven, superhero flick that's not afraid to show its heart and head? Director Zack Snyder's take on the “unfilmable” comic-book classic may not be perfect but the attempt is bold enough to deserve a second look.

Sis Rebbie to raise MJ's kids?

FAMILY MATTERS TMZ.com is reporting multiple sources in the Jackson family as saying that even if Katherine Jackson gets custody of Michael Jackson's kids, it will be the late singer's big sister Rebbie Jackson will raise the children.

The 59-year-old singer, who shares a home in Las Vegas with her husband of over 20 years, has kept a low public profile, but privately has been deeply involved in the lives of Michael's children.

TMZ reports Rebbie is currently living with Katherine at the family's Encino, Calif., home and is caring for the kids day-to-day.

Although the family is divided on many issues after Jackson's death, the website says there's no argument when it comes to Rebbie caring for the kids — and that whether she eventually becomes the custodial parent in name or not, she will end up as primary caregiver of the kids. METRO NEWS SERVICES

Pap gets a slap from Jude Law?

SCUFFLE A female photographer claims she was slapped by Jude Law outside a London restaurant on Thursday and is considering taking legal action against the actor, popeater.com reports.

Harsha Gopal taking pictures of the actor when, Gopal alleges, the star flailed his arms around, striking the woman.

“He hit me full on the face, it was a real stinger, it was very sore,” she told the Daily Mail. “It was deliberate — you could see it in his face. Maybe he didn't realize he was hitting a girl, but he could at least apologize.”

Law's lawyer called the claims “non-sense” and disputed that he didn't say sorry.

It through history the great religions have spoken to the return of a future Teacher. The Christians hope for the return of the Christ, the Buddhists look for the coming of a new Buddha, while the Muslims await the Imam Madhi, the Hindus a reincarnation of Krishna and the Jews the Messiah. How will we know Him? Surely He will ring our hearts with a message of sharing, justice and brotherhood. How can we prepare the way for Him? Each day brings opportunities, large and small, to act in favor of unity and justice. Our willingness to share will make a real difference in our world.

E-showdown: CNN v. Larry King

ONLINE BEEF A Twitter fight has broken out between Larry King and his handlers at CNN, TMZ.com reports.

King's wife Shawn says CNN asked him to stop posting personal details on KingsThings — such as him and Ryan Seacrest arguing over who's going to pay for dinner. In retaliation, King started a personal account, Shawn KingsHubby.

Gosselin love triangle emerges?

HOT COMMODITY A tabloid reporter who has been photographed twice with Jon Gosselin claims to be dating the 32-year-old father of eight, usmagazine.com reports.

“I didn't mean it to happen, it just did,” Star reporter Kate Major, 26, said Tuesday. “I went to do a story on Jon and ended up falling for him.”

Gosselin and Major were first photographed together Saturday at New York restaurant Accademia di Vino, where an onlooker told usmagazine.com that Major “was flirting shamelessly with Jon.”

On Tuesday, a source said the two dined in the Hamptons with Lindsay Lohan's father Michael and Real Housewives of New York star Jill Zarin, whom Jon asked “for media advice.”

Gosselin has yet to confirm if he and Major are an item.

Hailey Glassman, 22, also has yet to weigh in on Major's remarks. Last week, Gosselin announced that he and Glassman — the daughter of the surgeon who performed ex Kate's tummy tuck — were dating.

PREVIOUS DAY'S CROSSWORD AND SUDOKU ANSWERS:

Metro Recipe of the Day

Smoked Trout and Pasta Salad

INGREDIENTS:

1 each red and yellow pepper, seeded and quartered
10 oz (300 g) penne rigati or other pasta shapes
10 oz (300 g) smoked trout fillets
1 orange
1 large avocado
2 green onions, sliced
2 tbsp (25 ml) capers, well drained
1 1/2 cups (375 ml) arugula

DRESSING:

5 tbsp (75 ml) plain low-fat yogurt
2 tbsp (10 ml) lemon juice
1 tsp (5 ml) Dijon mustard
2 tbsp (25 ml) chopped fresh dill
1/2 tsp (2 ml) white sugar
Pepper to taste

METHOD:

1. Preheat broiler. Place peppers on broiler rack, skin-side up, and broil until skins are blistered and blackened. Remove from broiler and place in plastic bag. Seal and set aside to cool.
2. Meanwhile, bring large pot of water to boil and add pasta. Cook according to package instructions until al dente. Drain, rinse with cold water and drain well again. Transfer pasta to large salad bowl.

3. Flake trout fillets into bite-sized pieces, discarding skin and bones. Cut all skin and pith from orange and cut out segments from between membranes. Halve segments. Halve, pit and peel avocado, then cut into small chunks. Mix dressing ingredients and season with pepper.
4. Peel peppers and cut into strips. Add peppers to pasta together with trout, orange, avocado, green onions and capers. Add dressing and toss gently but thoroughly. Just before serving, toss in arugula.

ARIES

MARCH 21-APRIL 20
Life is full of possibilities, now more than ever, and the Sun in Leo urges you to let the artistic side of your nature flourish.

TAURUS

APRIL 21-MAY 21
Strive to keep your feelings under control today, and make sure you look at the events of your life from a logical perspective.

LIBRA

SEPTEMBER 23-OCTOBER 23
The Sun in one of the more big-hearted areas of your chart urges you to forget about being number one and do things to help life's also-rans.

SCORPIO

OCTOBER 24-NOVEMBER 22
Would you like to change the way you live? Would you like to lead a more meaningful existence? If so, now is the time to do something about it.

GEMINI

MAY 22-JUNE 21
Sometimes you can be too suspicious for your own good but today and over the weekend you will go to the other extreme and trust everyone.

SAGITTARIUS

NOVEMBER 23-DECEMBER 21
The Sun in Leo at this time of year encourages you to take the kind of risks others say you should try to avoid. Be brave, be bold.

CANCER

JUNE 22-JULY 22
A money matter or business issue is no longer yours to command, so put it out of your mind and focus instead on other things in your life.

CAPRICORN

DECEMBER 22-JANUARY 20
You may be stuck in a rut and you may be desperate to get some excitement back in your life, but first do something about your financial situation.

LEO

JULY 23-AUGUST 23
The Sun in your sign makes this the perfect time to start something new. It does not have to be amazing but it must have the Leo stamp on it.

AQUARIUS

JANUARY 21-FEBRUARY 18
The Sun in Leo at this time of year makes all things possible for those who know how to give and take. On balance you'll come out ahead.

VIRGO

AUGUST 24-SEPTEMBER 22
Make this the day you start to clear out all that emotional junk you have been carrying around like a bag full of guilty secrets.

PISCES

FEBRUARY 19-MARCH 20
If there are doubts in the back of your mind your efforts will most likely fall short, and that would be a shame for someone of your intelligence and talent.
